SAFEGUARDING: It is an essential duty of all charities to provide a safe and trusted environment which protects anyone who comes into contact with it including beneficiaries, staff and volunteers. The definition of ‘safeguarding’ is staff harassment by other members of staff, volunteers, trustees or potentially clients; harassment or overt physical, verbal or emotional abuse of a vulnerable person or child by someone from your organisation; staff member or volunteer observing that someone in their care shows signs of abuse whether from a relative, someone on the street, the work place or school. With the term ‘safeguarding’ in mind, please confirm the following:

Does your organisation provide and promote a safe environment for all staff, volunteers and beneficiaries of your programmes? Who in your organisation is the person responsible for listening to a complaint or concern?
If you deal with vulnerable adults and children, do you have an appropriate policy to protect them? What training takes place for all staff, volunteers and Trustees on safeguarding?
If your country of origin provides a certificate of good governance, please provide a copy.
How does the person responsible follow up a report? Who would they report to e.g. the CEO, Trustees, the Police, Social Services?
What incidents of concern has your organisations had in the last 12 months?
